Education Providers

CWA promotes welding as an integral and rewarding career option by:

- informing and providing training opportunities for welding professionals through seminars, workshops, conferences, plant tours, and publications such as technical bulletins, our flagship CWA Journal magazine, and chapter meetings and events.
- supporting welding education and development programs at high schools and post-secondary institutions.
- promoting welding as a career choice through career fair days, bursaries, scholarships and Skills Canada competition events.

Promoting The Future

Welding is a critical enabling technology for a wide range of Canadian industries. Over 300,000 employees make up the Canadian welding industry, in fields such as pipeline, military, research and development, aerospace, automotive, construction and medicine.

Both now and into the future, opportunities and demand for well paid professionals and career advancement in the welding industry will be strong for people with the necessary knowledge and skills. CWA:

- promotes the welding industry as crucial to the economic growth of Canada.
- encourages job creation.
- promotes skills training at a local level, through chapters, as a means of making the Canadian economy competitive.
