Topic:

The last few years new welding technologies and special welding functions have been invented to make welding and engineering much easier. It is important to share this information and experiences on these new technologies as it will affect us all.

MIG welding has been changed and modified from its original principle to an easy and reliable process such as CMT. Today's welding processes are reliable and easy to set up. New welding processes achieve high arc stability which is most important for quality. Better gap bridge ability, lower heat input, less distortion and higher travel speed are just a few advantages of these new welding processes. This seminar will help you understand a new welding technology for joining.
